R-7.10

Since a heap is a complete binary tree, levels of the heap are always filled left to right. Thus, if a left child is external, then the right child must either be external or non-existent. Likewise, if the right child is internal, then the left child is internal.